Various Types of Park Groups

Please note that these group names (types) are sometimes used interchangeably. A group may call themselves an alliance or friends or coalition or conservancy and not follow the definition below. The definitions below are general information about groups.

Public-Private Partnership – A Public-Private Partnership (PPP) is a partnership between the public sector and the private sector for the purpose of delivering a project or a service traditionally provided by the public sector. They typically have a Park Administrator that also serves as the Executive Director of the private half.

Examples: Van Cortlandt Park Alliance, Alliance for Flushing Meadows Corona Park

Friends of Parks Group – Typically grass-roots, volunteer group composed of residents and/or businesses coming together to work toward improving their park. Friends of Park groups work closely with their Outreach Coordinator and Parks to do a variety of activities like host clean ups, plan and implement events and It's My Park! Day projects, fundraise, advocate for their park, plant, restore trails, etc. Often these groups are not non-profits and use a fiscal conduit for fund-raising purposes.

Example: Friends of Mosholu Parkland

Friends of Mosholu Parkland's mission is to engage the Bedford Park and Norwood communities to garden, grow and develop fostering practices of environmental sustainability, human, social and economic.

Conservancy – A group with a formalized structure, a board, a staff, and non-profit status. Typically, they have an MOU with Parks to maintain and program a specific park.

Example: The Central Park Conservancy

The Central Park Conservancy is a private, not-for-profit organization founded in 1980 that manages Central Park under a contract with the New York City Department of Parks & Recreation. The Conservancy provides 85% of Central Park's annual operating budget and is responsible for all basic care of the Park. To manage the Park, Conservancy crews aerate and seed lawns; rake leaves; prune and fertilize trees; plant shrubs and flowers; maintain ball fields and playgrounds; remove graffiti; conserve monuments, bridges, and buildings; and care for water bodies and woodlands.

Other examples include the Madison Square Park Conservancy & Battery Park City Parks Conservancy.

Alliance – A group with a formalized structure, a board and can have non-profit status. An alliance is formed when various organizations (community-based organizations, city agencies, non-profits, civic groups, friends of groups) come together to create an 'alliance' and work together on a specific park/project. They can be a non-profit or use of one their member organizations as a fiscal conduit. They can also have an MOU with Parks to maintain and staff a specific park. An Alliance can also be called a Coalition.

Example: The Bronx River Alliance

The Bronx River Alliance serves as a coordinated voice for the river and works in harmonious partnership to protect, improve, and restore the Bronx River corridor so that it can be a healthy ecological, recreational, educational, and economic resource for the communities through which the river flows. The Alliance works in close partnership with the New York City Department of Parks & Recreation to achieve these goals.
